Allsteel

For impromptu seating, look no further than Seek. Designed for Allsteel by Marcus Curtis Design, the chair is ergonomic—with flexible back and pressure distribution—and stores stacked or nested. The light-weight but durable stainless-steel frame comes in black or silver; with or without arms and casters or glides; a mesh or solid-polymer back; and a polymer seat in one of eight colors. 563-272-4800; allsteeloffice.com. circle 471

ICF

Neither the techno man nor the whale, this ICF makes a splash in the office. Designed by Antonio Ruggiero, the workstation is composed of a table and a sound-absorbing polymer-covered partition set on locking wheels, which makes it easy to move and reconfigure. Two standard heights—39½ and 63 inches—are offered; the adjustable leg allows for leveling on uneven floors. 800-231-1625; icfsource.com. circle 472

Ruth Livingston Studio

Fine craft reigns in the inaugural collaboration between the San Francisco-based design studio and the Nevada millwork company Artefice by Dianda. The resulting line of motorized TV Lift Cabinets feature Forest Stewardship Council-certified veneers in Macassar ebony or rift-cut white oak, MDF construction, and a lacquer finish in red, black, white, metallic bronze, or metallic sand. The units measure 72 inches wide by 38 high by 17 deep. 415-435-5264; ruthlivingston.com. circle 475

Arper

It's a wrap! Designer Lievore Altherr Molina chose rich Silk Road jewel tones for the upholstery of his sleek Saari chair. The seating comes with arms or without, and the polished-aluminum conventional legs or star base can be finished in silver or black, with or without casters. Magnus Olesen

Don't be fooled by the mod appearance of i-Sit—the chair is as ergonomic as it is smart. Created by Design Concern, it features a lumbar pillow and a user-friendly mechanism that adjusts the back and tilt. The shell is constructed of laminated birch, the upholstery is wool, and the tubular steel legs are chromed. Pair it with the complementary ottoman. 45-9759-2411; magnus-olesen.dk. circle 474
